Other than the hall, various other buildings exist within the site, including two late-18th/early-19th century barn ranges (Hall Farm and Trent View Farm) and a pair of cottages.

The wider landscape is enclosed by a stream to the south, the old course of the River Trent to the east and by roads to the north and west. The formal landscaping, which includes lawns, tree belts and specimen trees, mostly date to the late-18th/early-19th century. Earthworks at the east end of the site (visible on late-19th century maps) are of unknown origin. Part of the site has been used as a caravan holiday park since the mid-20th century.
